

Concept Question 1-5: What differentiates an extraordinary node from an ordinary node? A loop from a mesh?

An extraordinary node connects to 3 or more branches each containing at least one element, whereas an ordinary node connects to only 2 branches.

A loop is any closed path with the same start and end node, and it may or may not enclose other loops. A mesh is a loop that encloses no other loops.